

A visit from Ike, a broke car, and other things

This last week has been utterly full, and I have been unable to post. However, I will return to the series on Freemasonry. The post "A Proper Interpretation" was necessary as it was moved by an all too common misinterpretation of Scripture.

I still have a ton of things to do, including getting a young lady's car back on the road, and clearing a road for a older lady who cannot do it, or afford to hire someone to do it.

Fortunately, Ike spared us any real destruction. It did knock out power for several hours. Where I live fared better than most. Some in the area were without power for three days.
